

Fact Sheet FIDIC

FIDIC is the French acronym for the international federation of national associations of independent consulting engineers.

FIDIC was founded in 1913 by three national associations of independent consulting engineers within Europe. The objectives of forming the federation were to promote in common the professional interests of national Member Associations and to disseminate information of interest.

FIDIC membership at present numbers over 62 countries from all parts of the globe. The federation represents most of the private practising consulting engineers in the world.

FIDIC arranges seminars, conferences and other events in the furtherance of its goals; maintenance of high ethical and professional standards; exchange of views and information; discussion of problems of mutual concern among Member Associations and representatives of the international financial institutions; development of consulting engineering in developing countries.

FIDIC publications include proceedings of the various conferences and seminars, information for consulting engineers, project owners and international development agencies, contract documents and client/consultant agreements. They are available from the Secretariat in Switzerland, and at www.fidic.org/bookshop.
